

SPRING AND SUMMER LAW COURSES FOR INDIGENOUS STUDENTS

UNIVERSITY OF SASKATCHEWAN
College of Law
LAW.USASK.CA

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

The University of Saskatchewan College of Law is offering 50 Indigenous students who have been admitted to a Canadian law school in Fall 2022 the opportunity to complete two first-year courses from May 9, 2022 - Final Exam July 25, 2022. Enrollment in both courses is required. The courses will be offered remotely with a combination of synchronous and asynchronous delivery. In addition to learning the substantive legal content, an emphasis will be placed on assisting students with developing the skills essential for law school success.

Students who will be attending the University of Saskatchewan will receive credit (8 credit units) for these courses upon successful completion, thereby reducing their course load in the 2022/2023 academic year. Students attending other institutions are encouraged to seek letters of permission to enroll at the University of Saskatchewan to ensure that credit for these courses will be recognized.

Applications require documentation that you have been accepted into a Canadian law school as an Indigenous student. Applications will be offered on a rolling basis until all 50 seats are filled.

REGISTRATION FOR COURSES

All students who are accepted into the course will be automatically registered into the courses. Each student will receive an account to show their balance for tuition and student fees. Students will be responsible to pay their balance by the USask deadline.
